Some parents teach their children at home rather than sending them to school. Is this a good or a bad thing for the children? Having a parent as a teacher is a bad thing for the children. Children, as we all, live in social, development their personality and improve their social skills there. It means, that people in children's environment should be different. You can't have your parent as your teacher. A person, who taught you to live in this non-easy life, taught you how to talk, walk and other basis abilities can not be the same person, who teaches you Math, physics laws and grammar in English language.

Also, children which are not going to school do not communicate with their peers usually. When they grow up, it is very difficult to making friends, because children had not any friendship experiance they did not improve social skills, and now they must to have all these abilities about how to talk and making friends.

In conclusion, parents should sending their own children to school, because it is very important to their social life. It is really few accidents, when you can't send your child to school (for example, if ^{the} child has mental problems) ²⁰⁰.
